Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy
Topics will be introduced by lectures but the main learning activity in this module consists of a variety of in-class exercises in tutorials and workshops. These exercises, and your preparation for them, will focus on the different elements of the syllabus and you will learn by doing, working individually, in pairs, and in small teams (LOs 4,5). The research (LO2), advice letter (LO3), and advocacy (LO3) elements of the module will be contextualised by using issues and principles from the areas of substantive law that you are studying at level 4 (LOs 1,2). All teaching and learning is supported by information (including the module handbook) provided on Canvas, our virtual learning environment The module is designed to provide formative assessment by progressive feedback on the range of prepared class activities which include presentation of research reports (LOs 1,2,3), letter-writing advising clients and warning of legal action (LOs 1,2,3), ethical debates (LO4), advocacy presentations (LOs 1, 2,3,5) and reflective notes (LOs 4,5). These activities will include in-class analysis of a draft advice-letter and letter before action, and a mock advocacy exercise in the teams of four that will work together for the summative advocacy assessment. For your summative assessment you will individually submit draft advice letters and letters before action at the end of semester 1 and undertake an advocacy exercise, including a reflection, in small groups of four to five, at the end of semester 2
